INTRODUCTION

AS THEY EMERGE FROM THE PANDEMIC, hundreds of restaurants across New York are responding to the Great Resignation by raising wages, advancing racial and gender equity, and building an industry where workers and their employers can thrive.

For years, One Fair Wage has documented the restaurant industry's multiple challenges, including race and gender inequities, poor health and safety conditions, and most importantly, subminimum wages. Even pre-pandemic, the subminimum wage for tipped workers was a direct legacy of slavery that created economic instability and the highest rates of sexual harassment of any industry because it forced a workforce that is in majority women to tolerate inappropriate customer behavior to earn tips. With the pandemic, workers reported that their tips significantly decreased while customer hostility, health risks, and harassment increased; when they were asked to enforce COVID protocols on the same customers from whom they had to get tips, millions of workers started leaving the industry en masse. New York has the highest rates of restaurant worker exodus of any state in the US – double the national average.

In response to this Great Resignation, thousands of restaurants are raising wages and increasing equity in order to recruit and retain staff. One Fair Wage has documented over 3,600 establishments across the country that have raised wages, with over 500 over them right here in New York.

This guide also highlights a select group of establishments that were honored at the New York High Road Restaurant Awards in May 2022. The Awards honored the top employers and restaurants on the frontlines of building a new, more resilient restaurant industry by paying fair wages and improving conditions for their workforce. Awards also honored employers for their advocacy for livable wages, since so many of the restaurants listed in this guide have been calling on New York State to pass policy that will raise wages and end subminimum wages across the state industry-wide, creating a level playing field and signaling to hundreds of thousands of workers that it is worth coming back to work in restaurants. This Guide includes a letter from at least 100 of these restaurant owners calling on the State to end the subminimum wage for tipped workers through policy.

This Guide allows consumers to know which restaurants are raising wage and improving working conditions. As we all go back to dining out, we encourage consumers to support these restaurants and let other restaurants not listed here know that you would like to see them raise wages alongside the incredible establishments featured here.

HIGH ROAD RESTAURANT AWARD WINNERS

The award of Health and Safety Restaurant of the Year given to the restaurant that has demonstrated the greatest commitment to worker health and safety during the COVID-19 pandemic was JAMES MALLIOS of Amali (Manhattan). The award was presented by Dr. Steve Markotwiz, Director of the Barry Commoner Center on Environment and Health at Queens College.

This year's runners-up were The Chocolate Room (Brooklyn) and Chez Oskar (Brooklyn).

The award of Racial Equity Independent Restaurant of the Year given to the restaurant that has demonstrated the greatest commitment to racial equity, especially upward mobility for workers of color and women of color in particular was JESUS CAICEDO-DIAZ of Skal (Brooklyn). The award was presented by Kerry Kennedy, President of RFK Human Rights.

This year's runners-up were My Kitchen Forest Hills (Queens) and Elisa's Love Bites (Manhattan).

The award of Gender Equity Independent Restaurant of the Year given to the restaurant that has demonstrated the greatest commitment to gender equity, especially anti-sexual harassment policy and pay equity, particularly for women of color was BARBARA SIBLEY of La Palapa (Manhattan). The award was presented by Kerry Kennedy.

This year's runners-up were Beso Restaurant And Bar (Brooklyn) and Anna Maria's Wine Bar (Rye).

New York City Livable Wage Restaurants of the Year

Awards were given to the Livable Wage Restaurant of the Year for several NYC boroughs, as well as a New York State regional award. The awards were presented by New York City Comptroller Brad Landers. The winners included:

MOHAMED “SIMO” KOULAMI of Paris Oven (Queens)

MUTALE KANYANTA of LOCALS (Brooklyn)

BRIAN KEYSER of Casellula (Manhattan)

CHRISTOPHER BATES of FLX Hospitality (Upstate New York)

Honorable Mentions

Coast and Wine Valley Bar (Brooklyn)

Zaca Cafe (Brooklyn)

Duzab Restaurant (Queens)

Finally, an award was given to the New York High Road Restaurant Industry Leader of the Year to Danny Meyer’s Union Square Hospitality Group (USHG), represented by ABE MONZON, USHG’s Head of Talent.

This year’s runner-up was Casa Del Chef (Queens).

The award for High Road Restaurant Advocate of the Year given to the restaurateur that has been most active in advocating for policies that raise wages of workers in the service sector was won by Michael Fuquay of The Queensboro (Queens).

NEW YORK RESTAURANTS CALLING FOR ONE FAIR WAGE

May 18, 2022

RE: Support for One Fair Wage Bill A10203/S808

Dear Senate Majority Leader Stewart Cousins and Speaker Heastie,

We, the undersigned, are restaurant owners who collectively support legislation to end the subminimum wage for tipped workers and allow for tip sharing among front- and back-of-house employees, as delineated in Bill A10203/S808, and call on you to prioritize and pass this legislation immediately.<sup>1</sup>

In April 2018, Congress passed a bill allowing restaurant employers nationwide who pay the full minimum wage to share tips with kitchen staff. This has helped owners in other states manage labor costs and create greater pay equity in regards to race, gender, and position in their restaurants. Many New York restaurant employers are prepared to move to a full minimum wage if tip sharing becomes permissible—along with modest tax relief only applicable to increased wages. It has become clearer than ever that hospitality professionals' economic futures are deeply insecure, with many facing hunger, housing destabilization, and additional debt. Being forced to rely solely on tips, creates a system that encourages rampant sexual harassment of women, reinforces a wide delta of inequity of race, madisenfranchisement of immigrants, people of color and working poor. With tips vastly down in this climate already, it's clear that having to rely on tips alone could never be sustainable.

New York must take this opportunity to ensure a sustainable and just future for all. In this case, that means government working hand-in-hand with hospitality professionals—both front line team members and owner/operators—to ensure that we have a living wage, and that the hard hit restaurants New Yorkers love have the tools needed to lead our industry and thrive.

These changes were important then, but now they are critical. This is a crisis moment for restaurants in New York, as our workforce has decided that it is not worth going back to our industry with so many inequities and insecurities. We need a level playing field that helps us attract and retain the talent needed to make our industry as resilient as it is delicious. Please enact these changes immediately to help us recover and rebuild.

Thank you for your consideration.
